Maritime transport and biodiversity protection

Case study: SAIS EBSA

Important habitats for Mediterranean megafauna species, i.e. Cuvier's beaked whales (Ziphius cavirostris), giant devil ray (Mobula mobular), striped dolphin (Stenella coeruleoalba), Mediterranean monk seal (Monachus monachus) and loggerhead turtle (Caretta caretta). Tuna, swordfish and sharks are also common

Valuable and highly vulnerable benthic communities as deep-sea corals (the so-called cold-water corals) and deep-sea sponge aggregations

Several human pressures: maritime transport, fisheries, offshore hydrocarbon industry (prospection and exploration for the moment), military operation, coastal and maritime tourism, land-based activities along the surrounding coastal areas

From projects to stable cooperation: MED-MSP-CoP

“[...] group of people who share a common concern, a set of problems, or an interest in a topic and who come together to fulfil both individual and group goals. [...] they often focus on sharing best practices and creating new knowledge to advance a domain of professional practice.”

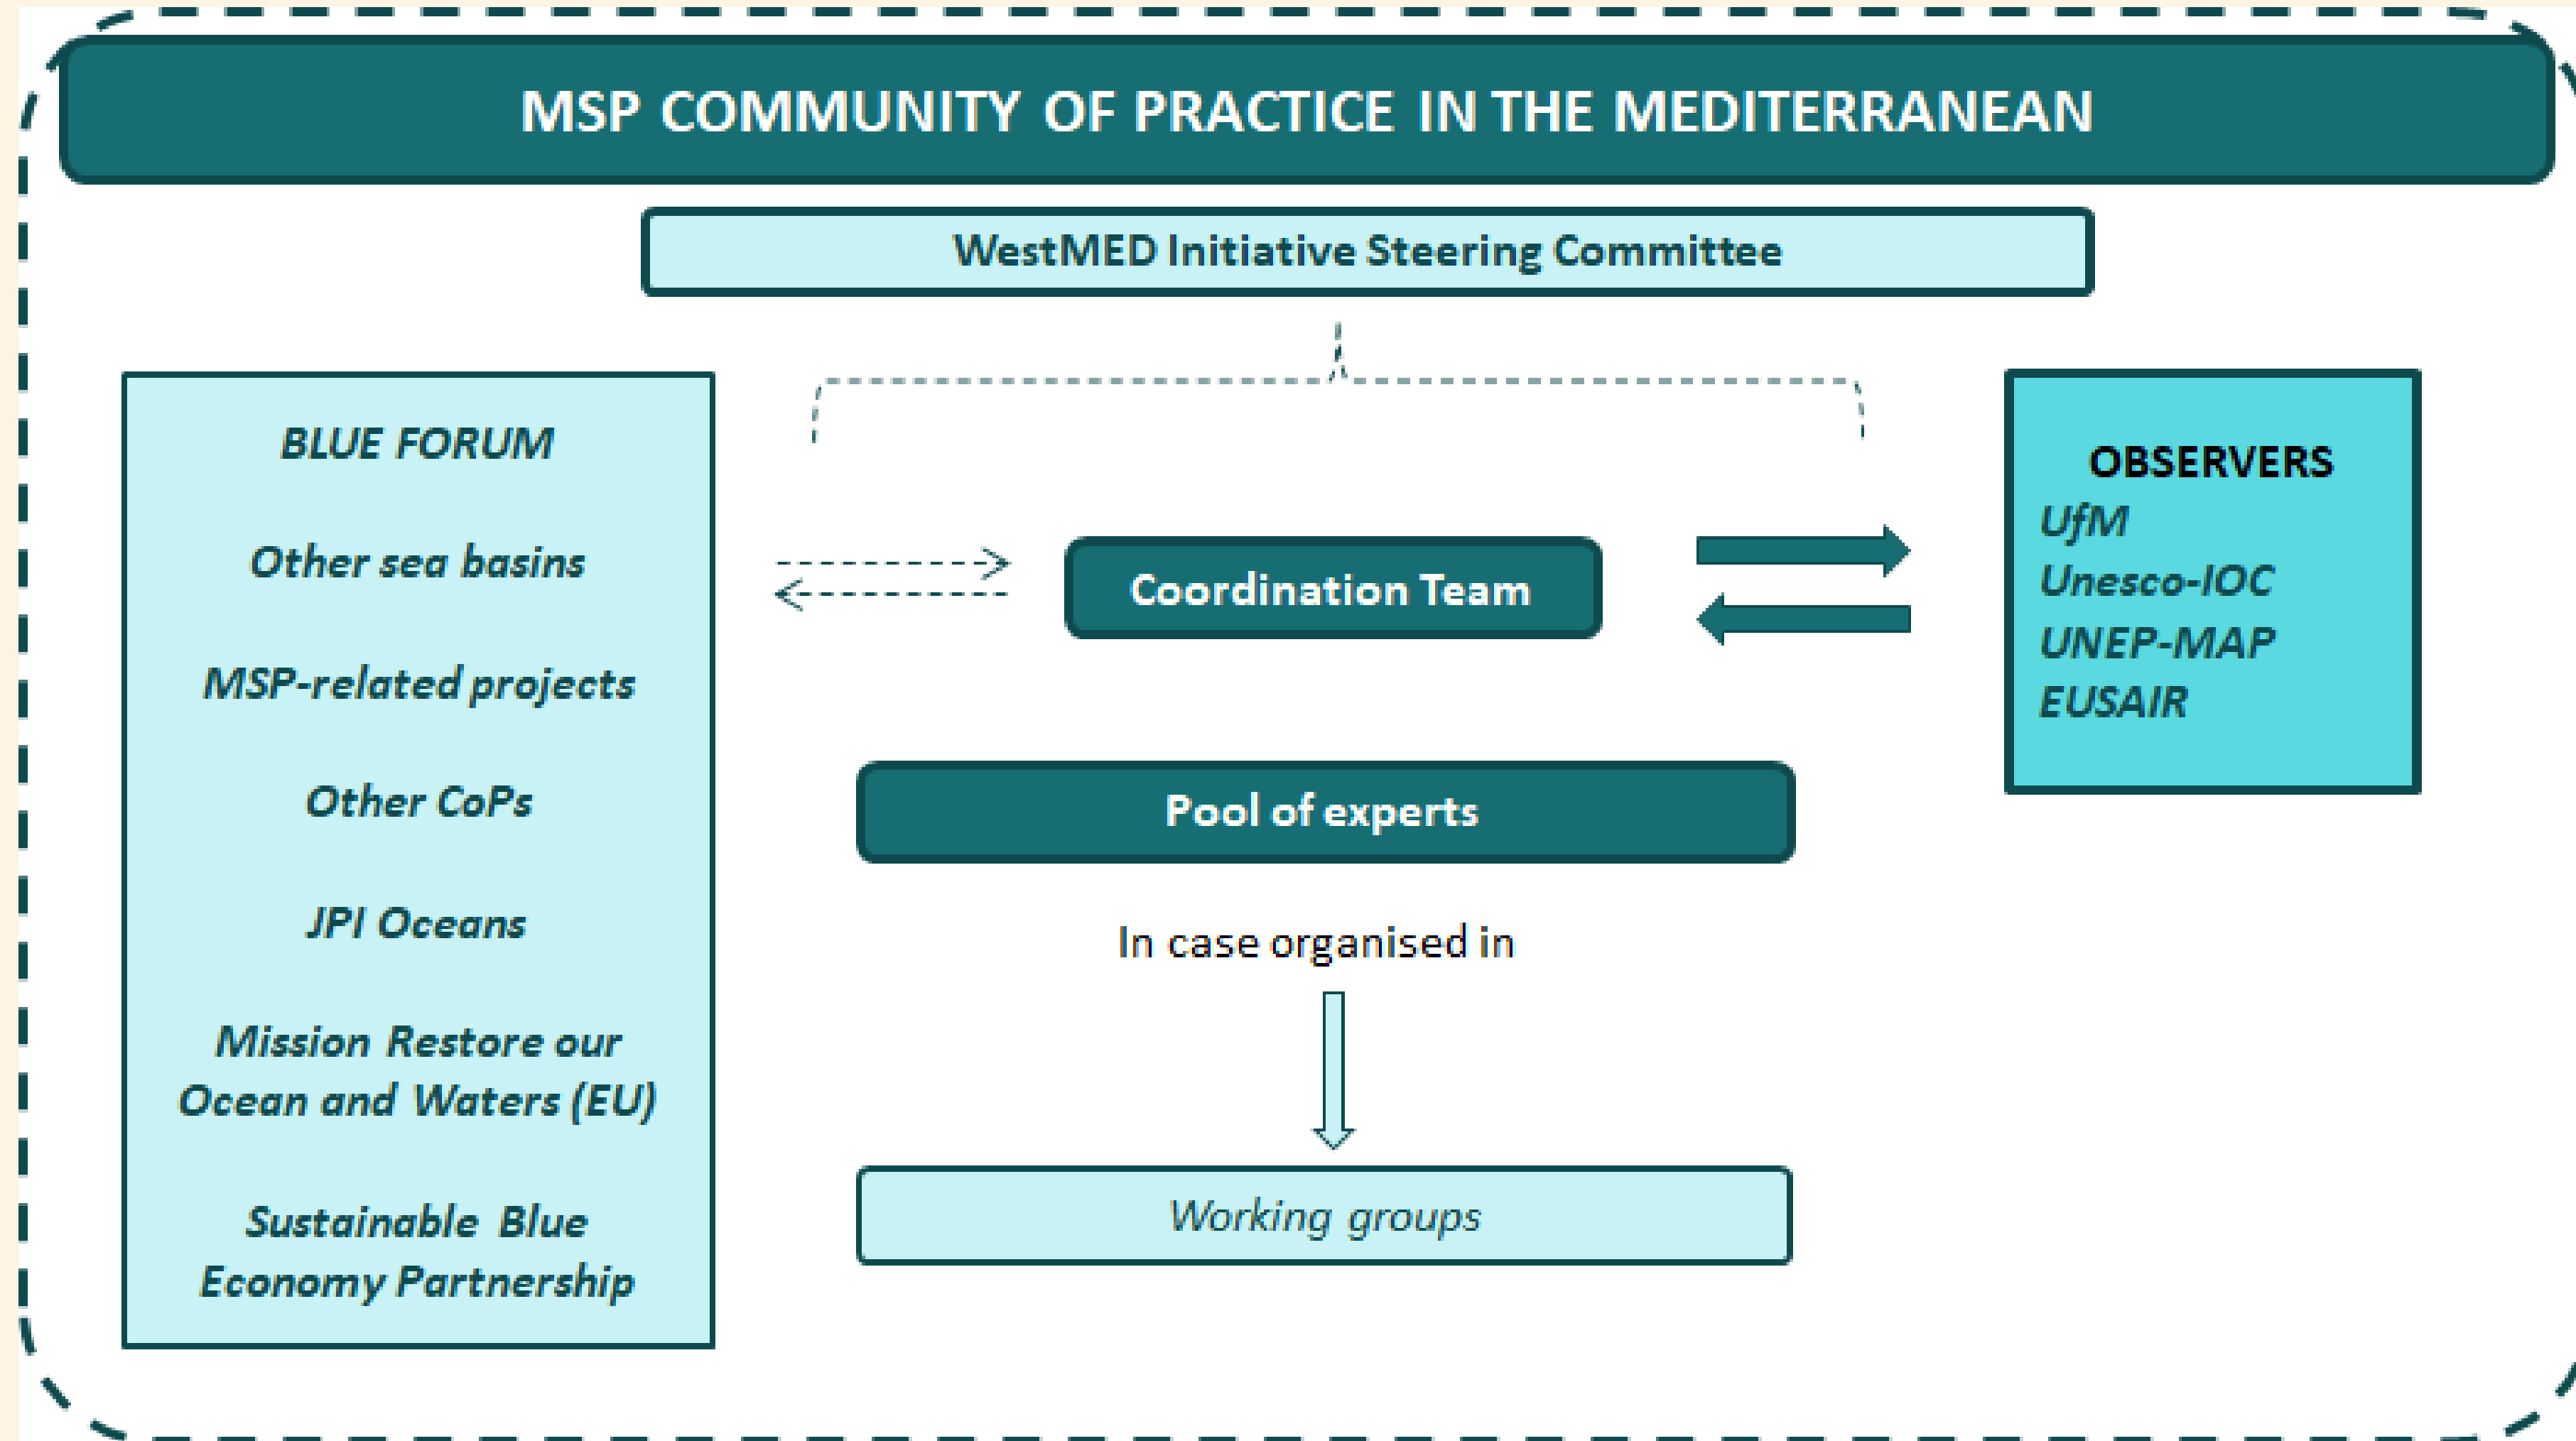

MED-MSP-CoP objectives

- Create a permanent communication and dialogue across borders among experts on MSP to exchange knowledge and experiences and to reach a shared perspective on topics of common interest
- Enhance cooperation between the north and the south of the Mediterranean sea on common MSP challenges and opportunities
- Share good practices and tools as well as suggesting coherent and harmonized approaches to use MSP as an enabler for sustainable blue economy and improved protection of the marine environment
- Provide recommendations supporting regional cooperation on MSP and MSP national processes
